

Frederick W. Cabbage

Fred Cabbage is Professor, Department of Forestry and Environmental Resources, North Carolina State University. Fred has B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. degrees from Iowa State University and the University of Minnesota, respectively. He served as head of the NCSU Department of Forestry from 1994 to 2004, spent five years as a research forester and project leader with the Southern Forest Experiment Station, in New Orleans and in Research Triangle Park. He was employed almost 10 years as a professor at the University of Georgia and two years as state forester in Kentucky.

Cabbage has taught about 60 forestry and natural resource courses, in 10 different subjects. He has authored or co-authored about 350 publications and given that many speeches on subjects that include forest policy, program evaluation, forest certification, nonindustrial private forest landowners, timber supply, and timber harvesting. He is senior author of the 1993 textbook Forest Resource Policy, published by John Wiley; served as the Chairperson and co-author of the National Research Council's 2002 report on National Capacity in Forestry Research; and is currently serving as editor of the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Forests and Forestry in the Americas. He was a Fulbright Scholar in Argentina and Uruguay in 2004, and has conducted projects periodically in the Southern Cone countries since.

Fred is a registered forester in North Carolina, and owns forest land in Georgia. He has served as an officer in several research organizations, including the Council of the Society of American Foresters and with the International Union of Forestry Research Organizations. He has been recognized in Who's Who in Science and Engineering, Who's Who in the Southeast and the Southwest, Lexington's Who's Who, Who's Who in the World, and Who's Who of American Teachers.