

H. Theodore Heintz, Jr.

Ted Heintz joined the External Review Panel in 2002. He is currently the Indicator Coordinator for the White House Council on Environmental Quality, where he serves on detail from the Department of the Interior. He has worked for Interior's Office of Policy Analysis in a variety of roles since 1976, primarily managing small groups of economists and policy analysts that deal with a broad range of resource systems and issues.

Since 1993, Mr. Heintz has worked extensively in the development of natural and environmental resource indicators. He has been a member of the Interagency Working Group on Sustainable Development Indicators (SDI Group) and has participated in on-going roundtables that are addressing criteria and indicators for sustainable resource management for forests, rangelands, minerals and water resources. He is currently on detail to the White House Council on Environmental Quality to lead an interagency working group that is developing plans for a national system of indicators on natural and environmental resources.

He holds degrees (B. E. E.) from Cornell University and Princeton University (M.P.A.)
